51,931

STATINTL

Kennedy, Obtains Independent

Gen. Taylor has been critical recently of or- will be expressed now through Gen. Taylor, ganization of defense forces and changes in the directly or covertly, as conditions dictate. Pentagon can be foreseen, although the official Mulfiled grumbling in Mashington, doubtless announcement of his appointment avoided that reflecting a titudes in the Pontagon and other connotation. The general frequently has districted preferring the status quo, indicate that a played an independence of thought about the nedy may feel the urge for another change at sfor the appearance of Gen. Taylor at the White the Pentagon.

It is doubtful that Gen. Taylor will supersede House and Pentagon.

his wide knowledge of other lands and his con-, of responsibility rests upon him and now he has tacts suggest that he will give attention to that an obviously independent and qualified advises.

President Kennedy has injected a strong per phase of our national defense. The recent gensonality into the White House staff by the selection of Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor as his military and the impending retirement of its director. adviser. A professional soldler, he also has been Allen Dulles, open the way for an overhauling an educator, an intelligence expert, and some-both in personnel and policy. Mr. Kennedy's thing of a goodwill figure about the globe.

shakeup is feared. The President has disturbed current organization of the armed forces, which is the command of hational forces little in the few conflicts with a setup he devised while in power. months he has been commander-in-chief, which A consequent deduction is that President Ken- does not preclude that action and could account House.

The President has had time to appraise the the existing command, regardless of overhaul; defense organization, and to decide whether of his role will be that of liaison between White not it conforms to his concept of preparedness and efficiency. If not, he has both the privilege The general's experience in intelligence and and the obligation for a overhaul. The burden